Q: what is the difference between a static structure and a simple structure in c++? I searched for more than an hour and I can't seem to find an answer. I know there is a difference between a function and a variable. But what is the difference between struct simple_struct{ void func(); }; void simple_struct.func(){ } struct static_struct{ void func(); }; void static_struct.func(){ }

A: A class is a structure that is not the only storage used for its member variables. A static_struct is a structure whose member functions have internal linkage. A simple_struct is a structure with at most one member function. The definition of the function is done in the header file, and the function is compiled in only once.

Q: Странная работа со скобками Имеется программа, которая считывает числа в формате 5-х цифр и выводит в консоль на выходе название зоны положения. Все это работает корректно, но если возможно, то как только я вызываю эту программу другим уровнем абстра 3da54e8ca3
