A: You can download a goolgemap.xml file from here. It's a xml format file that's good for making Google Maps links. Copy the link that's in the bottom left of the main page into a browser. Then paste this into a standard html link like this: Google Maps It's worked for me :) I find it easy to remember it as: /maps/ display map A: As someone who was trying to do the same thing as you, I have done this. 1) The easiest way is to save the map as a png file and link to it using Here is an example: 2) If you do not have a png of the map to link to you can get an xml of the map with this page: 3) Once you have the xml you can read through it, find the style element and get the width & height of the map in pixels. Once you do this, you can get the offset of the location of the center of the map and then make a url to the image. This is my method and works on my test server. UPDATE: In this URL there is a "center" tag that has values for the center top-left coords of the map. The value is a google api style of coord. And it is in the format of "37.385634,-97.459623" Linda Giacomelli Linda Giacomelli
