There are two ways to resize an image: Resizing the size of an image — Resize your Photoshop CC 2018 image by either manually resizing the file in the pixels or units system, or by drag-and-dropping an existing image in Photoshop CC 2018. The most common implantable ventricular assist device (VAD) currently used is a left VAD (LVAD). Mortality rates with a LVAD are comparatively low. However, the use of LVADs as a “bridge” to transplant has become more common and there is no clear indication of when patients are likely to die and when a transplant becomes clinically warranted. Heart failure is the most common reason for VAD use. However, there are many other indications for implantable VAD use. Some of these include the following: (i) Myocardial infarction (MI) (ii) Cardiogenic shock (CS) or tachycardia induced cardiogenic shock (iii) Low cardiac output syndrome (LCOS) (iv) High-risk cardiac elective procedures The use of left VADs has brought significant improvements in the quality of life of patients with heart failure. Left VAD patients can maintain good systemic perfusion, which increases the volume of blood and increases the circulating blood volume. VADs provide good decompression of the left ventricle and re-perfuse ischemic myocardium. Since cardiac arrest (CA) is a life threatening condition, the emergency cardiologists in the ambulance or the emergency department (ED) are often the first to be involved and may attempt defibrillation, such as defibrillation of CA. Moreover, it has been recognised that the outcome of CA is influenced by time-to-defibrillation (TTD), namely the sooner defibrillation is given, the higher the survival rate. Cardiac arrest and mechanical circulatory assist (MCS) devices are used as devices that enable patients to sustain life and avoid brain damage. Cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) is often performed on patients during CA and MCS. CPR is done to circulate and oxygenate blood of the patient. The two main CPR techniques include chest compression and rescue breathing. Compressing the chest of the patient forcefully breaks a small blood vessel in the heart by applying a large area of pressure, thus causing the blood to circulate. Rescue breathing is a less forceful way of taking the oxygen into the blood, but more efficient. Both these techniques are normally accompanied by some assistance of external electrical pulses generated

As the New York City Marathon looms (Sept. 29), here's a list of recommendations: Runners in training should eat plenty of carbs. They're necessary for speed and endurance and should be given in the form of sweets and breads like bagels and breadsticks. Traffic and mass transit aren't much of a challenge. Lots of runners take the subway and bus, and many others run the route before work. Don't be in a hurry to get your hands on a high-end GPS watch. They can be expensive, and you don't want to pay good money to find that after 19 miles you aren't exactly where you think you are. Find a pacer if you can. Talk to your local running club, or try to find a pace group online. Pacing is a good way to run into a friend or find a long-distance running buddy, as long as it's someone you trust. Buy an old running watch. I use a watch from the early '90s that I bought for $10.00 on Amazon. Timex, anyone? It's also cheap to replace when your battery fails. No word on the air quality, but the expected high temperatures and humidity should be perfect for those who like to train in the heat (very few, I suspect). --- Register now for New York City Marathon's Live & Virtual Challenge: Take in a live running experience from the race course or live stream a race from your computer, tablet or phone. Make sure to watch the coverage of the 100th anniversary race on NBC, from 8:00 to 11:00 a.m. ET / 5:00 to 8:00 a.m. PT. Coverage on NBC will include a preview of this year's women's course, including a detailed look at the iconic route from the Staten Island Ferry Terminal. --- Check out NBC's other stories about the race: Watch a Facebook Live on the men's course of the New York City Marathon from 2 to 5 a.m. ET on Sept. 24, 2013. The women will run their marathon on Sept. 29. --Follow @gregorykoch and @nytimesphoto on Twitter. Lens is also on Facebook. it on. It was a bit hard but I ended up going to the pool for a while. That was great. P.S. Ask everyone for their picture. If they refuse
